

WASHINGTONIAN

OCTOBER 2009

STYLE SETTERS

Eighteen of DC's Most Stylish People Show Their Best Stuff

INTERVIEWS BY JILL HUDSON NEAL

PHOTOGRAPHS BY MATTHEW WORDEN

LYNDA ERKILETIAN

Co-Owner of THE Artist Agency and cast member of the DC edition of Bravo's Real Housewives franchise, currently in development

page 59

Marc Barnes

Owner of the Park at Fourteenth and Love nightclubs

“Marc is a very efficient shopper. He knows exactly what looks good on him. He’s an American-standards kind of guy—jeans every day, white sneakers, a polo shirt, and a cap. But he can also show a lot of flair when he wears a beautiful suit or cashmere coat.”

—Gloria Nauden, executive director of the DC Commission on the Arts and Humanities

Lynda Erkiletian

Co-owner of THE Artist Agency and cast member of the DC edition of Bravo’s Real Housewives franchise, currently in development

“Lynda is not interested in being the average, conservative Washington woman. She’s open to new things—designers, trends, looks. Her personality is bubbly and fun, and that always shines through even if she’s wearing jeans. Her clothing is also very age-appropriate. She manages to be youthful without trying hard to be young.”

—Vici Subiyanto, partner in the DC boutique Muléh

Pepper Watkins

Historic-preservation and urban-planning consultant

“Pepper’s a huge fan of The Sartorialist, a fashion blog that really helped him define his classic style. He also pays close attention to fit and proportion because he’s so slender. He hit the jackpot a few years ago when he came upon a trove of his great-uncle’s old Western-style shirts in an attic. It gave him a leg up in the hipster-wardrobe department.”

—Becca Glover Watkins, Pepper’s wife and an account director at 3 Dog Agency